RCCM needs your help mapping research in Traditional, Complementary, and Integrative Medicine

The Research Council for Complementary Medicine (RCCM) and University of West London are conducting a research study examining the scope and development of Traditional, Complementary, and Integrative Medicine (TCIM) research in the UK. The primary objective is to map current TCIM research activity in the UK, including studies completed within the past five years.

If you have conducted research in TCIM in the past five years, you are invited to contribute to this study.
